Answer & Explanation

I. Rearrange the following sentences in the proper sequence to form a meaningful paragraph then answer the following questions.

- A. The first was demonetisation which was external, though somewhat expected
- B. if the central bank expects higher inflation, there's little or no chance of rate cut; it's bad news for bonds, stocks, home loan borrowers and New Delhi
- C. The one that followed was intrinsic and less obvious to most beyond the financial markets – it's about the central bank's own model that is used to forecast inflation and decide on the future action on interest rates
- D. Two months ago, RBI took a hawkish note on inflation, changing its stance from 'accommodative' to 'neutral' – jargons which the rest of India may be oblivious to, but can and did sent money markets into a tizzy:
- E. Within a span of six months Reserve Bank of India has had to battle dual blows
- F. If demonetisation had put a question mark on the credibility of RBI, its erroneous prophesy on inflation has left the masters of monetary policy looking for ways to make a smooth and honourable course correction

A. "But the problem is if they do that, they will take a big hit on their profits and they have not had the intention to do it because they can kick the can down the road."

B. Whenever a banker has to deal with a defaulter, he rather loved to restructure a loan —that is extending the tenor of payments and lowering of interest payments —than recovering.

C. Restructuring is a win-win situation for the banker as well as the defaulter, This prevented banks from writing down the value and taking a hit on their profits, and the defaulter continued to own the asset and secured an easier repayment term.

D. "For many of these bad loans, the market value would be, let's say Rs 50-60 on Rs 100, and the RBI has been asking banks to sell it to ARCs and take a haircut," says Subramanian of ISB.

E. Because recovery involved negotiating the value of the asset with a prospective buyer who often negotiated for invariably lower market rates than the book value.

F. If RBI forces many of these cases to insolvency courts, then the banking industry could see the next round of provisioning as more assets would be valued at half their values.

I. Rearrange the following sentences in the proper sequence to form a meaningful paragraph then answer the following questions.

A. Those opting to disclose unaccounted income under the new amnesty scheme, the Pradhan Mantri Garib Kalyan Yojana, face no restriction on depositing old notes.

B. However, the Finance Minister has suggested that such explanations will not be required for anyone making a deposit for the first time.

C. Apart from the human tendency to act only when a deadline nears, there could be genuine reasons for people not to have queued up at banks till now — including their faith in the Prime Minister, as well as the Finance Minister's statements that they had till December 30 to do so.

D. In November, the Governor of the Reserve Bank of India, Urjit Patel, said there was a 'confluence of thought' in the government and the central bank to deal with black money by removing existing Rs.500 and Rs.1,000 notes as legal tender.

E. But anyone depositing Rs.5,000 or more into a bank account will have to satisfactorily explain to two bank officials why this was not done earlier.

F. The new caveats, announced on Monday, restricting deposits over Rs.5,000 (roughly $70) are not just difficult to fathom but also constitute an unfair change in the rules of the game.

G. Now, just about ten days before the deadline to deposit these bank notes into accounts, a similar confluence of ideas has led to a stunning decision to make it harder for people to do so.
